CITIZENS MUST PAY FOR EXTENSION OF CITY WATER MAINS

Railroad Commission Cannot Force Cities Under General City Charter Law to Bear Cost.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Sept. 23.—The railroad commission has decided to prevent property owners in any city in the state that has elected to come under the general city charter law from being forced to bear the entire cost of water main extensions if the water utility is owned by the municipality. This in effect is the first of a decision handed down yesterday by the commission in the case of Joseph J. Davis et al. vs. the Janesville Water Company. This plan is owned by the city, having been taken over a short time ago. At present the butting property owners have to pay two-thirds of the cost of all main extensions; the cost of the service pipe from the main to the curb, and for street boxes and shut-offs. The reference here is to the fact that the private company paid for the main and service pipes and shut-offs and street boxes.

At the hearing he said: "When it came to voting for it (municipal ownership of the waterworks) everybody took the plant over, the property owners were forced to pay for the mains and nobody wanted it. My Attorney Douglas corroborated his statement by saying: 'I am afraid most municipal plants are subject to what Dr. Denning says. When the city thought they were going to get something for nothing.' Mr. Denning asked that when there are five or more consumers, a regular sized water company be compelled to lay mains at its expense. The commission holds that it cannot compel the city to do this as Section 225-200, general city charter law, provides that when the city owns a plant the extensions shall be made at the expense of the city or the property owners, 'as the council shall determine.'"

Under precedents established by the commission, it can force the city to make extensions and to pay for service pipes, shut-offs and street boxes, but by this decision it brings out the fact that it cannot say as to whether the property-owners or the city shall pay for main extensions. The commission recommends that the city pay for installations of service pipe.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are two girls fourteen years old. Are we too young to wear suits? We are large for our age.
(2) Are we too young to have boy friends?

(3) Do girls have to go to high school before they can go to college? If not, which would be best?

(4) Are we too old to start to take piano lessons?

(5) Are we too old to have our hair hanging down in curls?

(6) What would be nice to make our sisters for Christmas? We can't make anything.

(7) Do you think it is all right for us to have a hope box, and what should we put in it?

(8) You are rather too young to wear suits, but if you are large you would probably look all right in them.

(9) They do have to go to high school before they can go to college.

(10) No.

(11) You are rather old.

(12) Embroider underwear, towels, or make handkerchiefs with tatting edges.

(13) No.

(14) You are too young to begin a hope box. When you are eighteen or twenty there will be time enough to think of that.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are fourteen years of age and have been troubled with a skin disease. Will you please tell us how to keep our skin clear?

Two girls.
In occasional steam baths, the complexion will help keep it fresh, but by doing this regularly you open the pores and allow them to collect dust. This, with the oily secretions in the pores forms blackheads.

Instead of a steam bath use a good soap and warm water to cleanse the face at night, or a cleansing cream. Afterward dash cold water on the face to close the pores.

Following formula makes a good cleansing cream:

Two ounces of white wax, two ounces of spermaceti, twelve ounces of sweet almond oil, two ounces of distilled water, two ounces of glycerine and twenty grains of salicylic acid.

For a skin-food the following is recommended: Four ounces of oil of sweet almonds, six drams of spermaceti, six drams of white wax, two drams of borax, one and one-half ounces of glycerine, two ounces of orange flower water, fifteen drops of oil of neroli, fifteen drops of bigarade (orange skin), and fifteen drops of oil of pimento.

Melt the first three ingredients, add the glycerine, the orange flower water and dissolve the borax in the mixture; then pour slowly into the blended fats, stirring continuously.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Several years ago I went with a young man who was a model young man in every way. I became engaged to him and was the happiest person in the world.

But through a misunderstanding we broke the engagement. Now after this happened I started to go with another young man and I thought a great deal of him and finally he asked me to become his wife. I told him I didn't love him enough to marry him and consequently we broke up.

The first fellow is still unmarried, and furthermore, does not go with anyone. He has also said that he will only for me and will never marry.

I admit I am to blame in a way for our quarrel and I beg to ask if you think it would be all right to drop him a line asking him to call.

He is a young man and I would be proud of and he is kind and considerate of everyone. He is twenty-eight and I am twenty-five.

DOROTHY.
It won't be necessary or advisable for you to drop him a line, but you might invite him to call some evening. If he still loves you it won't be necessary for you to make any further advances.

"Till it does we must face the deficit together. Don't you think so?" she asked, stroking the bent head. "No, I wish I was a money maker," was the dispirited reply.

"Lack of consideration is worse than lack of money, dear. We must try to have an abundance of that to help out the finances," she said.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING
Fine Mustard Pickles—Mix half cup flour, three tablespoons ground mustard and one teaspoon turmeric with enough vinegar to make a smooth paste. Add three tablespoons brown sugar and enough vinegar to make one quart in all. Boil until thick and smooth. Have your pickles sliced, one dozen small onions, and one small head of cauliflower, two mango peppers, cut fine. Make a brine, let all vegetables stand in it over night, then scald in brine and drain thoroughly. Add vegetables to the prepared mustard paste, heat through and can.

Corn Salad—Boil eight ears of corn cut from cob; chop fine two mango peppers and one large head of cabbage; add four teaspoons mustard and one cup vinegar and a few drops of salt. Two cups of brown sugar, two quarts vinegar. Boil until corn is tender, then seal. The above makes about four quarts and is a delicious accompaniment to meats.

OYSTER WAMPOON
Two eggs well beaten, one cup milk, one cup bread crumbs, two tablespoons butter, two oysters, two tablespoons grated cheese, salt and pepper to taste. Melt the butter in a stew pan, add the eggs, milk and bread crumbs, let come to a boil, add the oysters, sprinkle the cheese over the top, and fold like an omelet. This makes a delicious luncheon dish.

SOOT WATER FOR PLANTS
Soot from a stove or chimney where wood is used for fuel. Put it into an old pitcher and pour boiling water on it; when cool use it as a spray for plants.

When it is all used fill up your pitcher again with hot water.

The effect upon plants, especially roses that have deteriorated, is wonderful.

OYSTER STEW
Buy the oysters in the shell. For one quart milk, add two dozen oysters, two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons grated cheese, salt and pepper to taste. Melt the butter in a stew pan, add the eggs, milk and bread crumbs, let come to a boil, add the oysters, sprinkle the cheese over the top, and fold like an omelet. This makes a delicious luncheon dish.

NOVEL DESSERT
Commonplace baked apples can be made into a delicious dish with a little added trouble by preparing as follows:

Put the cored apples into a deep dish; stuff with sugar, raisins and water. Fill dish half full of water.

Add slice, grated orange peel, brown sugar and two teaspoons of minute tapioca.

Bake as usual; then, before serving, throw a couple of shredded marshmallows into the hot syrup.

It is very satisfactory when baking anything else—cookies, pies or bread—as it requires no watching and gives the moist heat to the oven which so many cooks say that cakes require.

OYSTER DRESSING
One pint oysters, giblets of a chicken boiled until tender, one loaf of bread crumbled, one cup of boiling milk. Pour the hot milk and giblets over the bread, season with salt, pepper and sage. Stir oysters in and also one well beaten egg. Sufficient for one chicken.

ORIGINAL PLACE CARDS
A place card is made in the following way:

Cut from magazine advertisements of silver the fork which is almost natural size, paste on a lightweight card then cut out shape of fork.

Put name of guest on handle of fork and lay beside silver on table.

It will afford much amusement as the guest will not at first glance locate the place card.

FRIED OYSTERS—NEW
Wash and dry large oysters, dip them in beaten eggs, stand them in fresh grated cheese. Stand them aside for ten minutes, then dip a second time in the egg, and roll in fine cracker crumbs. Fry in deep fat and serve with celery.

OYSTER TOAST
Add one-quarter cup oyster water to one-half cup oysters and cook until plump. To this add one-half pint milk, salt and pepper to taste and reheat. Four over hot buttered toast and serve at once.

HOW TO LET ALONE A COUGH.

Murdering coughs is a popular sport in America.

One of the old-time called the other day. I don't often entertain the genus, but this fellow was paying his bill. He observed rather facetiously, that he'd have to start out and get a couple of hundred quarts of cough drops to even up. "What is your brand?" we inquired.

"Hero-morpho comp., a dash of heroin and a little of morphine," he said. "The man was speaking frankly, knowing we could never do business. 'Do you mean to say you sell the doctor's gallons of ready-made cough syrup doped with heroin and morphine?'"

"Sell it? Why, five-gallon orders are the usual thing. And that stuff—say, you could put in your but the other ingredient is the two business-like doses, but the doctors do buy it. What they can do with it I don't know. Suppose every body who comes on with a cough gets a box of it."

It is true. There are a minority of practicing physicians who are unquestionably popular and "going right to favor an as much sugar as desired to sweeten. Take a tablespoonful every two or three hours. It will aid the cough and do no harm."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Is not distilled water sterile?
Answer: It is not, except immediately after distillation. Distilled water is steam condensed to water and hence sterile. But it may easily become contaminated. Hence, to be sure it is sterile, you must freshly boil it.

The Sacro-Ilio Joints.
Please tell me where the sacro-ilio joints are.

Answer—Place your hands on your hips, the tips of the index finger on the "hip bone," your thumbs will then just touch the sacro-ilio joints behind.

Ready-made medicine is a bad bargain wherever you get it. Even if it comes straight from the United States, it is a bad bargain. Rarely vary rarely, indeed, to enable the victim to obtain needed sleep or food, but it is a bad bargain.

THE LOGICAL MIND.
Logic And a Sense of Humor.
Again, a logical mind and a sense of humor usually seem to go hand in hand.

Not is a logical mind only valuable in a material way.

It also influences the character of him who possesses it.

For one thing, a passionate sense of justice is the sure corollary of a logical mind.

Again, the logical mind is the forbearing mind, because it is clear-sighted enough to know its own weaknesses, and logical enough to drop the conviction that other people must have their weaknesses.

If there be any power of will joined to it, the logical mind will steadily mould its own character toward the best because it will see so clearly what is good and what is bad.

The Logical Mind Has Its Faults.
Of course, the logical mind has its faults. The habit of pushing things to logical conclusions, even though something worth-while is trampled upon, a disdain for expediency, and an impatience of stupidity and lack of logic in others are some of these.

But the very trend of mind that brings these faults helps to overcome them.

If I were a fairy godmother, with power to give a child one gift, I am not sure it would not be a logical mind. In fact, if it were a man child, I am pretty sure it would be.

Perhaps you can guess what I might give the woman child.

There are semi-weekly dances at the Plaza now, the dancers and musicians but these are attended mostly by the American and English fair sex while the true Argentine lady bides at home with the exception of a few young girls who come well chaperoned.

"Where's a woman unattended? Walks out alone she'll be offended."

By all the men that she will see, Now this is what was told to me.

But when I stroll the Avenue And view Buenos Aires widely

I pass untrammelled on my way Nor any male has aught to say.

Perhaps you're thinking with a smile, This lady isn't just their style!

Buenos Aires, Sept. 22.—Buenos Aires is a much maligned city as to its masculine manners. Harrowing tales are told from which you gather that the leading citizens and scions of first families have nothing more pressing to do than accost lone females along the avenues with a playful pinch now and then by way of diversion. The stories really had me worried but I am not by nature a George Ade timid sparrow. Neither could I visualize my Buenos Aires visit as being passed in the privacy of my boudoir. My first day here I took the plunge and started out thrillingly at one end of the Plaza. I arrived at the other a terribly surprised (I won't deny disappointed) and unpinched girl.

Since then I have sallied forth daily unattended and have yet to experience any untoward unpleasantness. To be sure, I occasionally catch a furtive remark but as long as it is in Spanish it needn't faze you. It's also true that frequently the men not only stare a bit but even stop to turn and watch you out of sight.

Surely a North American woman used to any big city in the United States is immune to a little thing like that.

In plain words Buenos Aires isn't any worse in the "masher" line than New York, Boston, San Francisco or New Orleans. It's not one-half as offensive in that respect as Madrid or even respect to Buenos Aires.

Really the Argentine maids and matrons rather encourage the stares and remarks of the fair sex. They are passing tingling than otherwise. As they pass they feel slighted and discouraged unless they leave a wake of admiring glances and ecstatic gasps of "hermosa" or "guapita."

You can't blame the poor things for being grateful for a little masculine attention on the streets. That's about the only time the men ever notice them.

Buenos Aires is indeed a man's town and wives and daughters (are used mostly to adorn the home. Almost all the smart breakfasts, banquets and functions at the Plaza, the Jockey club or the Paris hotel are affairs while stagnation is the usual lot of the women save for the wild excitement of going to the opera or to church.

RUTH CAMERON

The mother had been laboriously explaining something to her little boy, and because as busy mothers are so apt to do.

"You certainly have more patience than I would," said the neighborly mother, but I don't want to train my boy to have a logical mind. I want him to ask why, and I always try to answer him carefully, though I admit I get tired sometimes."

"What do you think about it, reader friends? Is hers a worth-while ambition?"

Personally, I can scarcely imagine a more worthy one.

A logical mind is one of the most precious possessions one can have.

A Logical Mind Better Than a Good Memory.
A good memory is a blessing, but a logical mind is ten times more valuable.

Memory deals only with the past, a logical mind deals with the present and the future in their relation to the past.

The logical mind is never the narrow mind. Prejudices have no place in it. It is the open mind. Since the thing it continually seeks after is the truth, can afford to stand up and keep truth out.

MISS MASON WRITES

Mashers at Buenos Aires Not Black as Painted—Peaved 'Cause They Didn't Flirt With Her.

By Margaret Mason.
(Written for the Gazette.)

"Where's a woman unattended? Walks out alone she'll be offended."

By all the men that she will see, Now this is what was told to me.

But when I stroll the Avenue And view Buenos Aires widely

I pass untrammelled on my way Nor any male has aught to say.

Perhaps you're thinking with a smile, This lady isn't just their style!

Buenos Aires, Sept. 22.—Buenos Aires is a much maligned city as to its masculine manners. Harrowing tales are told from which you gather that the leading citizens and scions of first families have nothing more pressing to do than accost lone females along the avenues with a playful pinch now and then by way of diversion. The stories really had me worried but I am not by nature a George Ade timid sparrow. Neither could I visualize my Buenos Aires visit as being passed in the privacy of my boudoir. My first day here I took the plunge and started out thrillingly at one end of the Plaza. I arrived at the other a terribly surprised (I won't deny disappointed) and unpinched girl.

Since then I have sallied forth daily unattended and have yet to experience any untoward unpleasantness. To be sure, I occasionally catch a furtive remark but as long as it is in Spanish it needn't faze you. It's also true that frequently the men not only stare a bit but even stop to turn and watch you out of sight.

Surely a North American woman used to any big city in the United States is immune to a little thing like that.

In plain words Buenos Aires isn't any worse in the "masher" line than New York, Boston, San Francisco or New Orleans. It's not one-half as offensive in that respect as Madrid or even respect to Buenos Aires.

Really the Argentine maids and matrons rather encourage the stares and remarks of the fair sex. They are passing tingling than otherwise. As they pass they feel slighted and discouraged unless they leave a wake of admiring glances and ecstatic gasps of "hermosa" or "guapita."

You can't blame the poor things for being grateful for a little masculine attention on the streets. That's about the only time the men ever notice them.

Buenos Aires is indeed a man's town and wives and daughters (are used mostly to adorn the home. Almost all the smart breakfasts, banquets and functions at the Plaza, the Jockey club or the Paris hotel are affairs while stagnation is the usual lot of the women save for the wild excitement of going to the opera or to church.

Presently, however, he became aware of some kind of commotion among these villagers. He heard whispering, low, hoarse voices, then the shrill of rapid feet jorked his gun from its holster. When Duane rose a giant man, livid of face, shaking like a leaf, confronted him with his own gun.

"Hands up, that you Buck Duane!" he roared, waving the gun. That appeared to be the cue for pandemonium to break loose. Several men lay hold of his arms and pinned them behind his back. Resistance was useless even if Duane had had the spirit. One of them twisted his hand from his saddle, and with this they bound him helpless.

People were running now from the street, the stores, the houses. Old men, cowboys, clerks, boys, ranchers came on the roof. The crowd grew. The increasing clamor began to attract women as well as men. A group of girls ran up, then hung back in fright and pity.

The presence of cowboys made a difference. They split on the crowd, got to Duane, and lay hold of him with rough, businesslike hands. One of them lifted his face and roared at the frenzied mob to fall back, to stop the racket. He bent them back into a circle; but it was some little time before the hubbub quieted down so a voice could be heard.

"Shut up, will you-all?" he was yelling. "Give us a chance to hear something. Easy now—easy. There ain't nobody got to be hurt. Their right; everybody quiet now. Let's see what's come off."

This cowboy, evidently one of authority, or at least one of strong personality, turned to the giant man, who still waved Duane's gun.

"Abe, put the gun down," he said. "It might go off. Here, give it to me. Now, what's wrong? Who's this roped gent, an' what's he done?"

The gaunt fellow, who appeared now about to collapse, lifted a shaking hand and pointed.

"That there feller—he's Buck Duane," he pointed.

A Medical Book Free

By Dr. N. A. Goddard

Modern Methods of Treating Chronic Diseases Without Operation, has just come from the pen of Dr. N. A. Goddard, the Milwaukee Specialist and is one of the most interesting as well as instructive little books the doctor has ever written. If you are a sufferer from Appendicitis, Rupture, Stomach, Colon, Kidney or Throat diseases of a chronic nature, you should avail yourself of his offer to send you this valuable little book free simply for the asking. A postal will bring it to you, in a plain wrapper. Many so-called surgical diseases, have been proven to be curable by medical treatment, more safely, more easily and cheaply by modern medical methods than was believed possible a few years ago. After you have read this little book, you can consult Dr. Goddard on his monthly visits to Janesville, free of charge and have the satisfaction of knowing that you have secured the expert opinion of a reputable specialist in these matters. If you have been advised to submit to an operation, surely do not fail to consult him before undergoing such an operation. His advice may save you many weeks of suffering, loss of time and expense, possibly your life. Dr. Goddard will be at the Grand Hotel, Janesville, Tuesday, October 3, and he makes no charges for a friendly visit. Hours 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Address DR. GODDARD, 121 Wisconsin St., Milwaukee, Wis.

"How'n Hell Did You Get His Gun?" waving his hand importantly. He was an old man and appeared to be carried away with the significance of his deed. "He like to rid' his hoss right over us-all. Then he jumped off, says he was Buck Duane, an' he wanted to see Jeff Aiken bud."

This speech caused a second commotion as noisy though not so enduring as the first. When the cowboy, assisted by a couple of his mates, had restored order again, someone had slipped the noose-end of Duane's rope over his head.

"Up with him!" screeched a wild-eyed youth.

The mob surged closer was shoved back by the cowboys.

"Abe, if he's Buck Duane how'n hell did you get hold of his gun?" bluntly queried the cowboy.

"Why—he set down that—an' he kind of hid his face on his hand. An' I grabbed his gun an' got the drop on him."

What the cowboy thought of this was expressed in a laugh. His mates likewise grinned broadly. Then the leader turned to Duane.

"Stranger, I reckon you'd better speak up for yourself," he said.

"That stilled the crowd as no command had done," said Buck Duane, all right," said Duane, quietly. "It was this way."

"The mob seemed to vibrate with a shock. All the ruddy warmth left his face; his jaw began to bulge; the corded veins in his neck stood out in knots. In an instant he had a hard, stern, strange look. He shot out a powerful hand that fastened in the front of Duane's blouse.

"Something queer here. But if you're Duane you're sure in bed. Any fool ought to know that. You mean it, then?"

"I'm Duane; yes. But I won't stand for the blame of things I never did. That's why I'm here. I saw that placard out there offering the reward. Until now I never was within half a day's ride of this town. I'm blamed for what I never did. I rode in here, told who I was, asked somebody to send for Jeff Aiken."

"An' then you set down an' let this old guy throw your own gun on you?" queried the cowboy in amazement.

"I guess that's it," replied Duane. "Well, it's powerful strange, if you're really Buck Duane what do you want to see Aiken for?"

"I wanted to face him, to tell him I never harmed his wife."

"Suppose we send for Aiken an' he hears you an' doesn't believe you; what then?"

"If he won't believe me—why, then my case's so bad—I'd be better off dead."

A momentary silence was broken by Sibert.

"If this isn't a queer den! Boys, reckon we'd better send for Jeff."

"Somebody went for him. He'll be comin' soon," replied a man.

and comely, and most of these seemed agitated by excitement or distress. They cast fearful, pitying glances upon Duane as he stood there with that moose around his neck. Women were more human than men, Duane thought. He met eyes that dilated, seemed fascinated at his gaze, but were not averted. It was the old women who were voluble, loud in expression of their feelings.

"That comes Jeff Aiken now," called a man, loudly.

The crowd shifted and trampled in eagerness.

Duane saw two men coming fast, one of whom, in the lead, was of sturdier build. He had a gun in his hand, and his manner was that of fierce energy.

The cowboy Sibert thrust open the jostling circle of men.

"Hold on, Jeff," he called, and he blocked the man with the gun. He spoke so low Duane could not hear what he said, and his form hid Aiken's face. At that juncture the crowd spread out, closed in, and Aiken and Sibert were caught in the circle. There was a pushing forward, a pressing of many bodies, hoarse cries and flinging hands—again the insane tumult was about to break out—the demand for an outlaw's blood, the call for a wild justice executed a thousand times before on Texas' bloody soil.

Sibert bellowed at the dark encroaching mass. The cowboys with him bent and cuffed in vain.

"Jeff, will you listen?" broke in Sibert, hurriedly, his hands on the other man's arm.

Aiken nodded coolly. Duane, who had seen many men in perfect control of themselves under circumstances like these, recognized the spirit that dominated Aiken. He was white, cold, passionless. There were lines of bitter grief deep round his lips. If Duane ever felt the meaning of death he felt it then.

"Sure this is your game, Aiken," said Sibert. "But here, use a minute. I reckon you'd better noun on till you hear what he has to say."

Then for the first time the drawn-faced, hungry-eyed giant turned his gaze upon Duane. He had intelligence which was not yet subservient to passion. Moreover, he seemed the kind of man Duane would care to have judge him in a critical moment like this.

"Listen," said Duane, gravely, with his eyes steady on Aiken's. "I'm Buck Duane. I never lied to any man in my life. I was forced into outlawry. I've never had a chance to leave the country. I've killed men to save my own life. I rode thirty miles to-day—deliberately to see what this reward was, who made it, what for. When I read the placard I went sick to the bottom of my soul. So I rode in here to find you—to tell you this: I never saw Shirley before to-day. It was impossible for me to have—killed your wife. Last September I was two hundred miles north of here on the upper Neeces. I can prove that. Men who know me will tell you I couldn't murder a woman. I haven't any idea why such a deed should be laid at my hands. It's just that wild border gossip. And see here, Aiken. You understand I'm a miserable man. I'm at it broken, I guess. I don't care any more for life, for anything. If you can't look me in the eyes, man to man, and believe what I say—why, by God! you can kill me!"

Aiken heaved a great breath.

"Buck Duane, whether I'm impressed or not by what you say needn't matter. You've had accusers, justly or unjustly, as will soon appear. The thing is we can prove you innocent or guilty. My girl Lucy saw my wife's assailant."

He motioned for the crowd of men to open up.

"Somebody—yon, Sibert—go for Lucy. That'll settle this thing."

Duane heard as a man in an ugly dream. The faces around him, the hum of voices, all seemed far off. His life hung by the merest thread. Yet he did not think of that so much as of the brand of a woman-murderer which might be soon soaked upon him by a frightened, imaginative child.

The crowd trooped apart and closed again. Duane caught a blurred image of a slight girl clinging to Sibert's hand. He could not see distinctly. Aiken lifted the child, whispered soothingly to her not to be afraid. Then he fetched her closer to Duane.

"Lucy, tell me. Did you ever see this man before?" asked Aiken, huskily and low. "Is he the one—struck you down—and dragged mama—?"

Aiken's voice faltered.

A lightning flash seemed to clear Duane's blurred sight. He saw a pale, sad face and violent eyes fixed in gloom and horror upon his. No horrible moment in Duane's life ever equaled this one of silence of suspense.

REVIEW: THE THINGS WHICH ARE NOT SEEN.

Strange things are happening in the country. St. Paul visited so long ago. Air-ships float in the clouds and submarines beneath the Aegean Sea. But even the war of today does not eclipse that assault which the little band of missionaries here made upon the stronghold of paganism.

What associations are here! In this region Aristotle was born. Here he taught the boy Alexander. Here Cicero was an exile for seven months. Euripides was born at Salamis, famous also as the scene of the greatest naval battle. But none of these circumstances can compare with what Paul did here.

The great library of classic literature will be searched in vain for anything approaching the Pauline injunction to "brotherly love." Here is action and reaction. The Thessalonians were not merely to do their neighbors good because they loved them, but they were also to increase their affection by doing them good. Love increases by its exercise.

St. Paul opens a novel sphere of ambition, namely, Quietness! Over against the gadders, he places the tranquil souls who go unostentatiously forward in their religious activities. He makes them luminous by contrast.

"What is the chief good of life?" is the question handed down from one age to another. It is a problem at which philosophers fail. Paul addresses himself fearlessly to the theme, and, as a result, gives us the immortal "Psalm of Love."

The Temple of Diana was a citadel of paganism. Embellished by the work of the Apelles and the chisel of Phidias, it was in itself incomparably beautiful. It was an asylum for political and civil fugitives. It was a colossal safety-deposit vault, holding the wealth of Western Asia. It is affirmed that there was no religious building in the world in which was concentrated a greater amount of admiration, enthusiasm, and superstition.

How astonishing then to find this supreme, independent Being donning the garb and using the language of a suppliant. He wants a house and he must needs ask His people to build it. The dependence of independence! What an impossible proposition! Who shall reconcile such a clashing of terms which seem so mutually exclusive?

It can only be that the dependence of God is relative, not absolute, assumed and not inherent. It is not far to find the reason of this assumption. God has nothing to gain by it. He takes on His dependence not for his advantage, but for that of His creatures. The proprietor of all things asks for an offering from His people. But it is not for His own sake. It is for the sake of His people.

It is for it is God's way of killing a vice and creating a virtue. The vice is covetousness, the virtue is benevolence.

The Bible contains many pathetic scenes calculated to stir the tenderest emotions. The last supper of Jesus with his disciples is chief of these; but next to this, is Paul's parting with the elders of the Ephesian church. We have seen Paul among his enemies. We have seen him in martial or forensic attitude; here we see him embraced and embracing in an undying affection. We have heard him thundering against a blind Judaism, or a paganism which thought the God-head like gold or silver or stone, but now it is as if his heart-strings were muffled, and we catch only the softest notes of what has been called one of the most touching and perfect addresses ever spoken.

Paul was an observing traveler. Evidences of the fact abound in his addresses and epistles. Out of the multitude of things observed, he screened with a dexterous hand those he could use to best effect.

In some walk he had taken through the city of Athens he had noticed an altar, the inscription of which furnishes him with a text—"To the Unknown God." With admirable skill Paul evades the charge of innovation which was made against Socrates on that very spot. He is not introducing a new deity—only making them acquainted with one whom they worshipped, though without knowing him.

But one day there came to Corinth—"this hotbed of wealth, excitement, and vice"—a stranger weary with his journey of forty miles afoot. The stranger stops before a shop, and reading the sign, "Aquila, Tentmaker," exclaims: "Ahi! here is one of my own craft. Perhaps I can find lodging and work with him." He finds him not only a fellow countryman, but a fellow-believer. As Paul lies down to rest that night, Jesus and the angels know that a new and mightier philosophy has entered Corinth. The kingdom of heaven has come in unobserved.

The art of Corinth, so superb with its famed bronze and capitals, with its cunning intellectual life, its power of seeing and translating into form the sublime and beautiful in nature, was only a veneer under which was a weltering vat of evil passions. The vaunted philosophy was impotent to cleanse. It did not so much as perceive the more essential. The system of the sophist could not reform the people on the same street with him. Corinth was a synonym of vice. To "Corinthianize" was to play the prodigal.

Into this "Vanity Fair" of the Roman empire, St. Paul came. His vision of its moral turpitude was clear, his conviction of its need of reform profound. His consciousness that he possessed the sovereign remedy, was equally joyous. He esteemed the applying of it a glorious privilege.

CHRISTIANITY COMPARED WITH OTHER RELIGIONS.

(Foreign Missionary Meeting)

When some one said to Wendell Phillips that the religions of the several non-Christian nations was good enough for them in each instance, he replied: "The answer to the Shaster is India; the answer to Confucianism is China; the answer to Buddhism is Turkey; the answer to the Bible is the Christian civilization of Europe and America." That is only the orator's way of putting the familiar saying, "Proof of the pudding is the eating."

Christianity in its historic and current applications is its own commentary and defense. It projects before the eye of man universally the noblest ideals of man universally. The noblest ideals of man universally. The noblest ideals of man universally. The noblest ideals of man universally.

At the same time it has no possible. It presents motives the strongest conceivable to the attainment of the ideal. It reinforces with the power of heaven the unequal power of earth. For two millenniums it has proved itself the power of God for salvation.

INEXPENSIVE BARN FOR SETTLERS THAT CAN BE ENLARGED AS NEEDED

This Barn Can Be Enlarged Whenever Necessary.

It's just as easy to plan a barn for future needs, so it can be enlarged to advantage to accommodate more cattle, as it is to build with only the present herd requirements in mind.

This is a point which nearly all pioneer dairy farmers in the northern part of Wisconsin are considering when putting up homes for their "milk and money makers."

A substantial, well lighted, well ventilated dairy barn, located in the best possible position is a prime essential to success in dairying, as well-informed farmers everywhere know.

Plans for the construction of standard types of rectangular dairy barns have been prepared by the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin.

Detailed drawings and bills for material for # number of these barns will be furnished Wisconsin farmers at cost.

A pioneer barn, which can be easily enlarged when necessary is included among the rest. The structure is 50 feet long and 18 feet wide, with stalls for eight cows and three horses, with one additional box stall. The design is shown in the accompanying cut. The dotted lines indicate the size to which the building may be enlarged.

A thorough discussion of problems in barn construction is contained in Bulletin 266 of the Wisconsin experiment station, Madison. Copies may be obtained free upon application by residents of the state.

SQUARE KNOT IS HANDY FARM KINK

Almost every day on a busy Wisconsin farm there is need of strong rope and skilful hands to tie it. The right knot for the right place is one of the chief measures in farm preparedness.

The square knot is one of the most useful of all knots. It is best to use in tying two ends of binder twine together in fastening bundles. Whenever a strong knot and one that can be easily untied is desirable, the square knot will be found to fill the bill.

The square knot, which can be tied without difficulty, should not be confused with the "granny knot," which is never advisable when safety first rules are in order. Here is the way a square knot is tied:

One end of the rope to be tied is taken in the right hand, the other in the left. The left end of the rope is first crossed in front of the right end, and then placed under the latter. The end now pointing to the right comes out on the side toward the worker, while the end pointing to the left is on the side away from the worker. The right end is crossed in front of the left, and then placed around the latter, as in making the first half of the knot. If pulled up, the knot should appear as shown in the cut.

FARM TYPEWRITER HAS ADVANTAGE

Just as the binder or the manure spreader takes away the dread and drudgery from difficult farm work, so the use of the typewriter helps smooth business wrinkles and makes office work a pleasure.

Nowadays farmers write more than formerly, when they did not advertise specialties in the way of purebred stock, selected grains or certified potatoes.

In answering the many letters regarding business matters, the typewriter adds tone and system to the work, besides saving time and trouble from writer's cramp.

Finding writing materials and engaging in penmanship after a hard day's field work is not a pleasant prospect by any means. The letters show it. But when a possible buyer receives a neat typewritten letter on a good quality of letterhead bearing the farmer's own business announcement, the chances for a sale are much strengthened.

Copies of all correspondence can be kept and filed away—a thing hardly feasible with pen or pencil. Should any controversy arise over sales or other transactions, the original letter can in short order be produced as evidence.

In choosing a machine for use on the farm, simplicity of construction and ease of operation are paramount. Careful inspection and trial, or in the case of unfamiliarity with typewriters, the purchase of a well-known make of machine will go a long way toward insuring permanent satisfaction.

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

Question.—Will frosted corn be good silage?

Answer.—Frosted corn can be used more economically in the silo than any other place, and Rock county is especially fortunate in having had so many new silos erected this season, for it enables the farmers to save feed that would otherwise be almost wasted on account of our unusual and unseasonable weather.

The frosted corn should be gotten into the silo as soon as possible after the frost.

If left standing in the field the leaves dry and become so brittle that they break off in the handling and much is lost.

When put into the silo the corn should be thoroughly wet down so as to fill the air space to prevent spoiling. So much moisture is taken from the corn as the result of the frost that considerable water is required to secure the right conditions in the silo. This is a very important point.

Question.—When should seed corn be selected in the field or after the corn has been harvested?

Answer.—If you have seed corn this year, you should select it for so many farmers have lost out on account of the drought and frost that there is pretty sure to be a shortage again this year.

It is best to select the seed corn in the field, and it should be done with great care. It is more work to do it this way, but it is work that pays in increased yields.

The writer has studied the records of the Boys' Acre Corn Growing Contest to learn if possible why the average yield was so much higher than that of the farmers of the state at large. He is convinced that the most important factor in the production of this superior yield was not soil, or care, but seed, it being required that pure bred seed be used. In 1910 records were made of yields of corn on 350 farms in different parts of the state. From 211 farms the average germination test was 88.3 per cent. One hundred and thirty-nine farms with poorer seed, the germination test was only fifty-one per cent and the stand 57 per cent.

There is a difference between a stand of 88 per cent and 51 is considerable, but the farmer with the poorer corn expended the same amount of labor per acre on his seed as the other, but with the poorer seed, the labor expended on selection and care of his seed corn, the returns would have been much greater. A drought year like this one might have saved many more days of unproductive labor in the field.

One grows vegetables of the kind that the family enjoys; but it is well to add each year something untied, so that the growing boy and girl will know and appreciate all kinds of vegetables as they appear in their season.

There are many of us who use up so much energy over the seed catalogue that we have none to plant weeds. A good garden represents hours of labor and attention. It is said that "mother earth is stepmother to plants but 'own mother to weeds';" she looks to it that her own children have their chance, so it is necessary that the successful garden must be well cultivated.

On many farms the men of the family cultivate the garden as they do the corn and potato plots, so the hardest work is done by the cultivator.

Every garden should have a strawberry bed large enough to supply the table with fresh strawberries as well as those needed for the fruit closet. The strawberry bed is a good one to turn over to the girls of the family, and if large enough, will supply them with plenty of pin money for the year, for strawberries always have a ready market.

Green peas are also easily grown and bring a good price in the market. The boys will probably enjoy the corn and potato crops for their allowance, although there are girls who are raising potatoes this year for seed and for exhibition at fairs, who are planning on making a nice little sum. The father and sons do the heavy work, being paid out of the proceeds.

Aside from the earning power of a well-planned garden of vegetables and small fruits, there is the economy of living as well as the pleasure in having fresh things for the table of one's own growing and served in their prime. Spinach, chard and beet greens may be canned for winter use, thus having the green vegetables during the season when they are out of market or are prohibitory in price.

Elaborate Bookkeeping Impractical. "Business management can and should be applied to practical farming, but farming is not a business, in the sense in which any indoor manufacturing enterprise is a business. Manufacturers, in working raw materials into finished products, are in a position easily to keep tab on every item of expense and income. Weather conditions have little or no direct effect upon their operations. The growing of crops and the raising of stock are much more complicated as arts than the manufacturing of steel, for example. Farmers have to deal with many factors over which they have practically no control. It is the combination of these factors with their consequences which makes any elaborate system of farm bookkeeping impracticable in most cases."

It does not pay—
To buy feeds blindly;
To take too much for granted;
To be afraid of words like "protein" or "carbohydrates" because we do not hear them every day;
To wait until feed is scarce before buying;
To buy unbranded feed.

EDGERTON BOY TELLS OF LIFE ON BORDER

Mrs. A. H. Clarke of this city is in receipt of a most interesting letter from her son James, who is at the border in the Elkhorn troops. Clarke enlisted as a private and has been promoted to the post of sergeant since the troops went south. The letter follows:

"Widmore, Texas, Saturday Evening, 16th.

"Dear Mother: It has been a delightful day for our start to Austin and even under the heavy load our company is feeling fine. The entire division with the exception of the Wisconsin troops are in camp here on this plateau. It is some sight. Every department of the army has its share here. Fifteen thousand men and over 2,000 horses and mules, besides 175 auto trucks, are spread around, and we are each carrying six pounds of emergency rations besides our full equipment. All officers except from majors up are using 'put' tents. I have had to build a fire in front of my tent to see, but it doesn't help much. Each day's rations are issued separately and it is some different to what we are used to. We had coffee, beans, soy butter and hard tack to-night for supper. Very likely that will be our menu on the next day. I will write a little each day and mail the whole when I get a chance. Just now I'll crawl into the tent and get to sleep, as we will start at sunrise for Comal."

"Sunday, p. m., 17th. Whether this is Comal or not, goodness only knows, and I don't care much. There isn't anything in sight to name that I see. On one side of the camp is a scrubby field of cotton. The camp is a mosquito mecca. We hiked six and three-fourths miles today and our rations lost well over a hundred men. Some simply dropped from exhaustion and others were so sore footed that they could not move. I am a few feet off except for my shoulders where the pack straps have chafed them a little. Our company only lost three men, and after a rest they came on and camped at a pretty place. It rained last night but not enough to soak us up. Several rattlers were killed during the night and one Fourth regiment man was bitten, but walked with his company today. He says that except for a slight faintness, perhaps from fright, that it has not bothered him. Of course the rattlers are not attached to him. Our mail overtook us each day, and surely I will hear from home today. Supper is nearly ready and will simply be a continuance of the hard tack and beans. I am a mess sergeant to send you a box of hard tack so you can sample it for yourself. One fellow in describing our grub said: 'Hard tack for breakfast, water for dinner and swell up for supper. Another, who is very wealthy, sang out: 'Follow me and wear rings under your eyes.'"

"Sunday, 7 p. m. I have simply got to add a little more. The mail is in and nothing came for me. I had expected a note of some kind. The officers have just passed on a foot inspection. Many of the men have blisters and corns that are very painful. Thank goodness my feet are O. K. Since my last installment I have found out that our regiment lost 157 men today. Most of them are in camp now but hardly able to continue tomorrow. Others were sent back to the base hospital at San Antonio. The mail comes off tomorrow so I will have to get to bed in order to feel right. When I get home you will be glad to throw a stone into my bed if I am to sleep comfortably. My little numbers are shocking and very likely I'll have to eat in the back yard. Well, goodnight, mother. I think I will close this and hand it to some rancher along the route. Love to every one of you."

YES, SIR, SMITH, HAVE THE FINEST PRIVATE UMBRELLA IN NEW YORK.

UMBRELLAS

Umbrellas should be sold in sets, like auto-picks, instead of singly. A man ought to have at least two dozen. There is a lot of vulgarity about owning one umbrella. It is just as bad as owning one book. A man should own a troupe of umbrellas or a kennel.

A practical umbrella set might be made up as follows: Five practical umbrellas for home; five practical umbrellas for the office; five dissolving umbrellas to lend to friends who are caught at your house in a without and borrow an umbrella without any intention of bringing it back (these umbrellas would melt after three minutes in the rain); five umbrellas with poisoned needles in the handle, for plain thieves; and five umbrellas for miscellaneous leaving around—at the barber shop, on the street-car, at the cobbler's, or at the theater. (These latter umbrellas might be fitted with pigeons, or some other homing device.)

Also, a man might have an umbrella with hidden writing on the outer side, which would appear with a short shower. This would be an umbrella trap which might be set for certain folks of known klepto tendencies. With a short bathing, the words would appear on the outer surface: "I stole this umbrella." A person could make a hobby of umbrellas, as men now make hobbies of horses and dogs and pipes, and perhaps hire an umbrella secretary.

Praying Made Easy.

Mechanical devices for repeating prayers are familiar in the East, but they are outdone, in saving of labor, by the "prayer flags" of Tibet. These are suspended on long lines, sometimes reaching across a river. As long as they are moving in the breeze they are supposed to be recording prayers for the benefit of those who put them up.

Second Team During Week To Go Through Without Defeat—Announce Schedule For Next Week

Facing the first week's schedule of the National League, the Peanuts are looking forward to a week of hard fighting in passing through its initial contest without a defeat. The first Nuts were the victims last night, dropping all three games, the first by a score of one, the second by four and the final game by one hundred and thirty-eight.

The second round opens on Monday morning. Games are to commence half an hour earlier than during this week, 7:30 being the time decided upon. Members of the schedule committee are being given the same instructions by team managers. According to ideas when the league was organized it was planned to finish the schedule before Christmas. The schedule committee thought that three games with each team would be enough to draft a schedule accordingly, not placing any dates but for the games of the first week. When they got down to figure it out, however, they found that with the ten teams it would take just about six months before the schedule was finished. As a result the idea of playing each team twice a week has been suggested. This plan may be decided upon later. The scores of the game last evening:

TO REVIVE NEW ORLEANS RACING ON BIG SCALE.

(By Associated Press.) New Orleans, La., Sept. 23.—Work began today on the old race track at the State Fair grounds for the Business Men's Racing Association meet, to begin November 1 and continue until the middle of February. The question of reviving racing here has split the community into warring factions for a long time. Leading citizens, including dignitaries, have taken a hand in the battle. Dr. Mac Diarmid, president of the racing association, said today that there will be no interruption of the races in spite of the many protests. Joseph H. Murphy will again preside as the judge.

The Giants again triumphed over the Cubs yesterday, 5 to 0, making their seventeenth straight victory. Sallie pitched a strong game, allowing but seven scattered hits. The win places the Giants within three games of the record which was established in 1884 by the Providence club of the old National league. Playing at the ball, they are the Giants may have a big part in deciding the league leadership. They have another series with the Braves and another with the Dodgers before the season ends.

MORRIS MILLER

The Moros, wild men of the Philippines, are beating the words into the ears of the American people. The man who dies on second night may have been stabbed to death. Like the British dominions, the sun never sets on the baseball diamonds of the world. A game starts in one quarter of the globe before the last inning is played elsewhere. The sound of the bat and the bleachers' yell harmonize in a hymn of civilization. So at last the Moros, most dreaded of Philippines—crucel, ruthless, whose previous generations have been in the number of enemy heads they could show as trophies—turn to the king of sports to work off their superfluous energy. By the same token there is hope for the second and third night may lead to a great Philippine baseball league. Moros clashing with Igorrotes for the championship.

The Occident stake for three-year-old trotters, which is the big racing event of the California state fair every fall, was instituted over thirty years ago by Governor Leland Stanford, who named it in honor of a trotter owned by him that in 1873 led the world's trotting record with a mile in 2:13 3/4. The sound of the bell that reduced the mark to 2:14, being his partner in the honor. Occident's blood lines are unknown, his sire being a pacer called St. Clair, whose pedigree was traced and who can't be a day pony. But Occident showed speed, and when Governor Stanford bought him the price was $5,000.

Mabel Trusk and St. Frisco in their Grand Circuit duels this year have trotted the fastest five and six heat races on record, which fact attests their stamina, while their records of 2:03 1/2 for the steeple and 2:03 1/2 for the mare, made in the regular course of racing and not to see how fast they could go, are evidence of their endurance. Either trotter unquestionably could step a half-mile in less than a minute if asked to go that distance only, and each probably is up to a quarter in 28 seconds.

Brooklyn can boost of a pitching staff that ranks with the best in the game from a pitching standpoint, but that is not all. The Brooklyn pitchers are more dangerous with the stick than are any other set of box men in the major leagues.

The Detroit Tigers played an exhibition game in Toronto recently, five thousand fans turned out to see it, but the game couldn't start on time because Ty Cobb, the star attraction, delayed his appearance. He has been through a desire to get some first-hand information, concerning the war from wounded soldiers returned from the trenches in Europe.

Peter the Great now has six trotters with records of 2:05 or better to his credit, they being Peter Volo (2:02), Margaret Drullen (2:03 1/4), Mabel Trusk (2:03 1/4), Peter Mc (2:04 1/4), Grace (2:04 1/4), and Peter Scott (2:05).

CRONIN, DALTON, RYAN ALL JANESVILLE MEN DUBUQUE BACKFIELD

"Mottey" Assured of Full Position, Ryan Stated for Half, and Cronin for Other.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 23.—That Dubuque college will be represented by one of the strongest elevens that ever wore the purple and gold is the belief of Key City fans at present. While a week ago it seemed impossible that Coach Lorals could be able to whip his candidates into an aggregation capable of holding its own with such elevens as Creighton and St. Thomas, the returns of the members of the premier 1915 eleven and the discovery of some very promising material among the horde of candidates after variously butting the prospects for the local institution assume a very different aspect.

Perhaps the most welcome of the late arrivals was Ed. Kipp, all-conference tackle and one of the hardest working lineups Dubuque ever had. The Waterloo youngster never qualified as a grand, spectacular performer, but has always been there with a punch which kept his side of the line from wavering. He is a man that can be depended upon to play every game in the same fighting way, hence his arrival was a big stimulus to Dubuque college prospects.

The backfield find of the season is Cronin, a Janesville youngster who appears to have everything except experience. Of offensive style of play is not unlike that of Dalton, Dubuque's mighty fullback. On the defense he is proving a revelation and for this reason has clinched a varsity position. "Blondy" Ryan, whose "educated toe" contributed greatly towards Dubuque's success last year, is again booting the ball phenomenally. However, he will be forced to fight for his position, the quarterback position is the subject of a two-cornered fight between Cantillon and McGuire. In spite of the fact that the latter is a deadly tackle and great open field runner, the odds favor the former, who possesses cool judgment, speed and everything else that could be expected of a 135 pound quarterback.

Dubuque will have one of the heaviest lines in its history this year. Not since the days of Bendage, who used his 285 pounds of weight so effectively that he was styled a whole line in himself, have prospects been so bright. Bowe and McCarthy, two youngsters, who are favorites for line positions, are the scales at 185. Whalen, another husky, who had a little experience at St. Mary's, is using 170 pounds of good, solid muscle effectively. Canavan, who appears to be too inexperienced to make the team this year, is receiving special attention from Coach Darais because he falls only a little short of 200 pounds. Two of Dubuque's best linemen, George and Sweeney, have no arguments in the avordupois line but the former knows all the tricks of the line's trade and Sweeney is so fast that weight is a secondary issue in estimating his worth. Maurice Flaherty, one of the five strongest tackles the Buckeye conference has produced, will be eligible for non-conference games. Although a little below weight he is in perfect trim and tips the scales at 180—a fact that means he will be a big argument for Dubuque's success against teams of university calibre.

SOX KEEP UP PAGE; BEAT YANKS 6 TO 3

Cicotte Wobbly at Times But Pitches Good In Pinches and Three Run Lead Gives Victory.

The Sox jumped away to a three run lead in the first inning and won, 6 to 3. In the first round three hits off Morridge and Baker's error counted three runs for the locals. Though Cicotte was hit in the stomach by a line drive in the eighth and won the game by making two more in the ninth on two singles and an error.

Tigers defeated Washington Friday, winning out in the ninth inning, 6 to 5. Detroit did not get started until the seventh, when Young knocked a home run with a man on. They made two more in the eighth and won the game by making two more in the ninth on two singles and an error.

Brown 6, Macks 3. The Browns won today from the Athletics, 6 to 3. A rally in the eighth was good for four runs. Pratt walked and Marsans singled. They made two more in the eighth and won the game by making two more in the ninth on two singles and an error.

The last half of the mile that made Lee Axworthy champion trotting stallion was done in 50 seconds, but as that was at the end of a mile in 2:03 1/4, it means a good deal more than the mere figures would indicate in the way of speed. Fitted for a half-mile dash against the watch, good day and track, the son of Guy Axworthy probably could do the distance in 47 seconds.

In 1902 H. L. Dorety of England won the all comers' lawn tennis tournament at Newport, R. I. and annexed the national crown. That was the only time the singles title has passed out of this country. The Doherty brothers, R. F. and H. L., won the doubles title in 1902 and again in 1903.

SPEAKER SECOND MAN TO HAVE BAT HONORS SINCE A. L. FOUNDING

Cobb Falls Down for First Time Since 1906—Leads in Stolen Bases and Number of Runs.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Speaker put another point between him and Cobb in the race for the American League batting champion this week and with Cobb's concession of the title may now be reckoned the champion. The Georgian still leads in stolen bases with sixty, against his record of ninety-six for the whole season last year, and also is in first in number of runs scored with 103, compared with 144 for the whole 1915 season.

San Francisco schoolboys will again play the English rugby code this season. The public schools of that city, in addition to expert athletic instructors, also have women instructors for the girl students and of athletic league for girls, including such sports as swimming, basketball and tennis.

First Colonization of Gallipoli. Athens colonized the peninsula of Gallipoli more than 2,500 years ago. Its inhabitants, the Dolionian Thracians, asked Athenian aid against savage neighbors, and Mithridates walled off the isthmus near Bulair to keep the enemy in check.
